

“The Hook,” “The Book,” and “The Cook,” are terms frequently used in the book publishing industry. In this case, “The Hook” relates to a character that drew you into the story. “The Book” poses questions about specific scenes or characters. “The Cook” refers to questions you would ask the author about the story. If you want to learn more about “The Cook” and his books, subscribe to Rob Jung’s newsletter, The View from Middle Spunk Creek, at www.robjungwriter.com.

Book Club Questions

THE HOOK

1. Which character would you like to have lunch with? Why?
2. What is the first question you would ask her/him?
3. If you were casting a movie of Judgment Day, who would you cast in the role of your lunch partner?

THE BOOK

4. Each of Rob Jung’s books addresses a social/moral issue. In Judgment Day, the issue is how inadequately our criminal justice system treats people with psychological issues. Discuss how Judgment Day affected your view of that issue.
5. What did you learn about our political system that you didn’t know before you read the book?
6. Magnolia Kanaranzi was an extremely volatile, difficult person. Were there times when you felt empathy or sympathy for her? When? Why?

THE COOK

7. If you could ask the author one question about the book, what would it be? [If you’d like an answer, email Rob at rob@robjungwriter.com.]
8. Henri Hawke and Samantha Jones were the benefactors of $50 million? Did they live happily ever after? Would you like to see another book featuring these two characters?
9. If you could make one change to the story of Judgment Day, what would it be?

Judgment Day is the third book in the Chimera Chronicles Trilogy. The first two books of the trilogy are The Reaper and The Sower. Although it is the third book, Judgment Day can be read as a stand-alone.*
